Mental Resilience

"If you can't fly then run,

if you can't run then walk, if you can't walk then crawl, but whatever you do you have to keep moving forward." - Martin Luther King Jr.

There may be various moments in our lives where we feel like we just want to give up. It is ok as well as important for us to acknowledge that our life journey is filled with challenges and struggles. Not that every day is a bright day. But how we manage through those tough situations that life presents us and sail through them shows our Mental Resilience. College life can sometimes be filled with challenges like meeting deadlines, personal struggle or just coping up with peen pressure and facing failures on all these challenges. But resilience comes as a part of facing all those challenges and bouncing back when things go wrong and not avoiding them. The key to build Mental Resilience is the acronym HOPE. Healing-It's absolutely ok to take a break when we are overwhelmed and feel like things are getting rough. Taking a step back and giving time to heal makes us tougher and more determined.

Optimism-The cunnent times are incredibly very rapid and fast, especially for Gen-z. Upholding an optimistic outlook is very much crucial for success. Being positive and optimistic helps us to exhibit resilience in times of all kinds of adverse situations.

Penseverance- The song, when the going gets tough, the tough get going is a very powerful reminder for us how resilience sparkles like a diamond showing us the trail to keep moving forward. It's fine if things don't go as planned, we should just keep our heads high and leap back after facing all the obstacles. Endurance-Having a setback specially in college days are inevitable. It could be an unsatisfactory grade or an opportunity getting missed. It does not define failure, rather is a chance to figure out new approach for improvement. With endurance we only become stronger and that helps us to go past the tough roads.

Life will never be perfect, but we can make it beautiful by nising after struggles, learning from failures and marching ahead with confidence. Let's just remember Resilience is not about surviving, rather it's about evolving and progressing in our life journey. So, let's all keep rising, fighting and never stop believing in ourselves. We've got this!!!

What's up Indira....

The month of octoben was Full of activities as it was Festive Season. All the clubs planned exciting events fon the students and Faculties added to this with Feild visits for the second year students. Navnatri celebrations, Halloween and Diwali vaction gave students some time to nelax and prepare for semester end exam which are scheduled in November.

Starting with the National holiday, everyone knew that this month is going to be blast. Navnatri Festival started the very next day on 3rd November giving everyone the chance to get all dressed up For upcoming nine days. sync media club made it more exciting by arranging a jamming session for both students and Faculties. Club ifinenix which is a Finance Club arranged an informative event For students. As most of the second year students were enjoying these events thind years were little busy with their black book and placement preparations though all the senions were excited for the first years Who will be joining college soon.

With all the dilema of Finishing assignments and participating in the activities, second year students were notified about the feild visit which were mindfully planned considering each specialisation. Another most important and mindful event that happend was the Indira survivor Festival. Speaker of the event was Mr. Snikanth Bolla who's the founder Chairman of Bollant Industries also called as the third eye business Tycoon who inspired the students with his execptional journey.

It was a whole different ride for all the students as the month was perfect blend of studies and masti.

Festive Feast

Navratri

Today We live in a patrianchal System. convensations of equality are very normal for us. Though the movements like Feminism and equal rights are there, Few people still are of the opinion that Female being is submissive rather they should be submissive but it is the same society that celebrates Navratri worshiping different divine Female energies representing women as Shakti.

Navnatni, a Festival that spans nine day celebrating and praying to different hindu godesses. It's an Indian Festival celebrated differently in different parts and regions keeping devotion and Fun in common. Each state in India has its own tadka for this Fest.

Considered the heart of Navratni, Gujarat celebrates it with great enthusiasm. all Gurjratis gather in an open space and dance their heart out on the beats of Garba wearing prettiest ghagrajas. in west bangal it expands to the celebration of art. The city turn into a huge art exhibition. People set up huge pandals and clay idols of Devi Dunga are created which at the end of the festival immensed in the river.

There's a special color theme Followed by everyone during these nine days and it's a unsaid competition between all the ladies to look their best. Well who decides the colours with what logic is a tricky question.

That's how divine Female energy is celebrated in this patrianchal society.

In Maharashtna, this is celebrated with a whole lot fun. From Garba, Dandiya nights to huge pandals, these nine nights are a sight to watch. On the very First day Gthabastapana is done and next eight days Maharashtrians worship different nine avatars but with a colourful twist.

The legend

Mahishasura, a powenful demon, gained invincibility through a boon from Lord Brahma, which stated that no man or god could defeat him. Empowered by this, Mahishasura unleashed ternor across the three worlds. To restore balance, the gods combined their energies to create Goddess Durga, a divine warnior endowed with their collective powers.

Armed with weapons and riding a lion, Durga fought Mahishasura for nine days and nights. On the tenth day, she defeated and killed him.

This symbolizes the triumph of good over evil and the power of the divine feminine. The tenth day is celebrated as Vijayadashami or Dussehra.

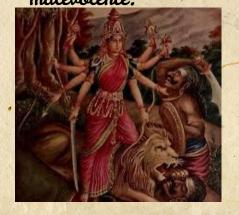

Triumph of good over evil!

The legend of Dussehra

The origins of Dussehra are deeply rooted in Indian mythology. According to the epic Ramayana, Ravana, the ten-headed king of Lanka, abducted Sita, the wife of Lord Rama. After a fience battle that lasted ten days, Lond Rama, aided by his devoted brother Lakshmana, loyal devotee Hanuman, and an army of vanaras (monkeys), defeated Ravana and rescued Sita. Dussehra commemorates this monumental victory. In another narrative, Dussehra celebrates goddess Dunga's victory over Mahishasura. The battle, fought over nine days and nights, culminated in the goddess slaying the demon on the tenth day, symbolizing the ultimate triumph of divinity over malevolence.

cross-calture

Bhoot Chatundashi, observed on the 14th day of Krishna Paksha in the Bengali month of Kartik, is steeped in cultural and spiritual significance. This day is believed to be when the veil between the living and the spirit would is at its thinnest, allowing ancestral spirits to visit their earthly homes. It is akin to Pitru Paksha, a period dedicated to paying homage to depanted ancestors.

Bhoot chaturdashi

Halloween

Modern Halloween is a vibrant amalgamation of traditions, featuring costume parties, trick-ontreating, pumpkin carwing, and haunted attractions. The iconic jack-o'-lantern, carwed from pumpkins, is thought to ward off wandering spirits—a symbolic gesture that mirrors the protective role of the 14 diyas in Bhoot z.

Despite their geographical and cultural differences, Bhoot Chaturdashi and Halloween share several similarities. Both festivals honor the connection between the living and the dead, using light as a tool of protection, and encourage storytelling about the supernatural.
